

Culture Bridge ...

... Means Understanding Others And Reflecting Our Own Situation

Christmas Cookies

Every year at Christmas time in Germany, in most families cookies are made. When you visit the traditional Christmas Market, you will notice that Christmas in Germany is not only marked by the Christmas trees with their imposing decoration. No, also the smell tells you that Christmas time has come. Smells like cinnamon, honey, sugar and other variations of ingredients.

Everywhere people are sitting in little coffee-shops eating cookies and drinking something warm. The cookies are formed like Christmas trees, moons, angels or as Santa Claus. Little children also think that if they put Christmas cookies and a glass of milk on a table near their bed, this will make Santa Claus happier and maybe he will bring them more presents. However, this is only wishful thinking, of course! But when children do this, they also use Christmas cookies. You can buy those in the super-market or in a bakery-shop, but the best ones are those which you bake yourself!

These cookies are an important part of Christmas. You cannot go without them if you want to have a comfortable evening with the family or friends. And, of course, they are really yummy!!!

